Twenty-six Projects Selected as Winners of the 2010 residential architect Design Awards

Washington, D.C., June 15, 2010 – residential architect magazine, published by Hanley Wood, LLC, and the only publication designed specifically for the residential architecture profession, announces the winners of its 2010 design awards program.

The residential architect Design Awards have grown into the largest and most competitive residential architecture awards program in the country. The goal is to always create a rigorous program where winners are recognized for their outstanding work in advancing residential design.

The 11th annual residential architect Design Awards received 978 entries in 16 categories, and only 26 projects were singled out for accolades. The jury featured six distinguished architects, including Ed Binkley, AIA, ed binkley design, Oviedo, Fla.; Louise Harpman, Assoc. AIA, Specht Harpman, Austin, Texas; Jennifer Luce, AIA, Luce et Studio, San Diego; John V. Mutlow, FAIA, RIBA, University of Southern California School of Architecture, Los Angeles; Julie Snow, FAIA, Julie Snow Architects, Minneapolis; and Richard Williams, FAIA, Richard Williams Architects, Washington, D.C. In all, they bestowed 19 Merit awards, six Grand awards, and one Project of the Year award.

“We give our jurors wide latitude to adjust the program as they see fit to maintain its high quality,” said S. Claire Conroy, editorial director of residential architect and CUSTOM HOME, noting that awards were not given in every category. “If your name is among this year’s winners you shouldn’t feel lucky—you should feel proud. Fewer than 3 percent of our 978 entries are featured in our awards issue, making RADA the most competitive housing design program in the country.”

Full coverage of the winning projects appears in the May/June issue of residential architect and online at www.residentialarchitect.com.
